

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to air "Stolen Honor", an inaccurate anti-Kerry documentary days before the election, on all of their stations, is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. This so-called documentary serves their political ends instead. It's not intended to serve the public; it's intended to influence the political process. This shows why we should strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. And it shows why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
